HISTORY OF BOWLING DATES BACK OF THE MIDDLE AGES

HILO PLAYERS

There is hardly a mort which has a mort hiterating history than bowling with the polling of the polling received in every financial color and and its war. A regularized authority, which dates back quite as history, which dates back quite as history or the polling received is ever from at that, which is a work to be polling to the price with the middle and captured in the history and the work of getting the from a triangle of the price with the middle and captured in the history and the work of getting the from a triangle of the work of getting the from the middle and captured in the middle and captured in the history and the work of getting the from the history and the strip to fit has been desirable as the polling of the work of getting the from the work of gettin from being scorched by the burning rays of the sun; as well as protecting the spectators and players. In many places this formed one of the most picturesque spots about a well kept park or garden, though very frequently it was rituated in close proximity to the dining room. As an after dinner sport of our burly Dutch and British ancestors, it aided in the digestion of their heavy meals of that time, consisting mainly of beef and pudding lubricated with heavy ale and potent punch.

America early in the eighteenth century, and possibly the latter part of the seventeenth. It seems to have been very popular in New York early in the eighteenth century. An old map of that city, of the date of 1728, shows a bowling green on the north side of the public garden, situated near the king's farm near the foot of Murray and Warren streets. Also in 1732 the locality called Bowling Green, at the foot of Broadway, and known by the same page at the side of the untold happiness vigor and manhood ly combined in our lines.

dreen, at the foot of Broadway, and known by the same name at the present day, was leased from the city government and laid out as a public bowling green. From the time that the sport was introduced into America it has really never died out, though the outdoor game has long since given way to the indoor.

Prehibited by Law.

As an outdoor sport, the game originated from several games, cayles, French quilles, skittles, loggetts and skayles being the most prominent. In cayles and loggetts, conical shaped pins made of bones were set up in rows of six or eight and the players tried to knock them down by hurling clubs of "sheepe's joynts" at them. Knocking the pins down by bowling a ball at them same at a later period. In the game of carreau, the players tried to knock them down by bowling a ball at them same at a later period. In the game of carreau, the players a ball at them same at a later period in the game of carreau, the players bowled at a fixed mark, which in skayles, closh, French quilles, cloddynge, skittles, Dutch pins, four corners, half bowl rolly polly, nine pins, the marks bowled at were pins similar to those of the present day, and bowled at with a ball. The games were immensely popular for a long time, until some laws were passed prohibiting nine pins and stuffar games. For a while this stopped the game, but it did not die out. The objectionable features were cut out.
